

GUIDANCE NOTE 4

Sensitive Words and Expressions

Updated January 2025

These Guidance Notes aim to provide a general indication of the criteria that is used in approving the use of sensitive words in the name of a company or business name.

What are sensitive words and expressions?

Sensitive words and expressions are those, which, when used in a company (or a business) name, need approval before the company name can be registered or the business name can be used.

These Guidance Notes give broad guidance on the criteria your company or business will need to meet if you wish to use any of the words and expressions that are considered as sensitive, including those which require approval under Section 27(3) of the Companies Act or under the Companies Names Regulations 1988.

This guidance is given in fairly broad terms because it is not always possible to give definitive criteria. The final decision in each case rests with the Minister and Companies House and the criteria can change in the light of experience and differing circumstances.

Names with letters or abbreviations of letters

For any names that include singular letters or which contain any form of abbreviation within the name, Companies House will always require a signed letter in writing from the applicant explaining clearly what the abbreviation stands for or what the particular letters in the name stand for.

Words that imply National or International Pre-eminence

British or Britain - the criteria for use of this word in your company or business name can vary depending on the way the word is used. Normally Companies House would expect the company or business to be British owned. You would need to show that the company or business is pre-eminent in its field, preferably by providing supporting evidence from an independent source such as a Government Department or a trade association.

If the word "British" is qualified by words that do not describe an activity or product, for example by using a "made-up" word, evidence of pre-eminence is not necessarily essential. You would however be expected to show that your company, or business, is substantial in relation to its activity or product and that it is eminent in its own field.

National - the criteria for use of this word is similar to that for "British".

Gibraltar or Great Britain - if you wish to use either of these expressions as a prefix, or if you wish to use "Great Britain" or "Gibraltar" then the criteria are the same as that for "British".

International - if this word is used as a prefix to your company or business name you would need to show that the major part of its activities is in trading overseas. If you wish to use it as a suffix, approval will usually be given if you can show that its main activities are exports or that it operates in more than one country overseas. Approval is usually given to companies wishing to use this word when the company is incorporated with a minimum share capital of at least £5,000 and is involved in a trade that is international in character such as travel or transport, provided that the name is not misleading or likely to give rise to a justified complaint.

European, Europe, EURO, European Union or EU – an activity letter will always be required explaining the activity of companies wishing to use these words or abbreviations in its name. Names that include these words may be approved provided that they do not imply a connection with any of the official bodies of the European Union, and provided that the name is not misleading or likely to give rise to a justified complaint.

Words that imply Government or Public Authority Patronage or Sponsorship

Authority, Board or Council - if the name you have chosen implies that your company or business has government or public authority patronage or sponsorship, you will be asked to provide evidence of a genuine connection to support your application - for example a letter of support, and consent to use the word, from the relevant authority.

Words that imply Business Pre-eminence

Association, Federation or Society - if you wish to use one of these words, your company would normally be expected to be limited by guarantee. Each member should have one vote under the constitution, and normally any profits should be used to further the objects of the organisation rather than be paid out to the members as dividends. If you want to use one of these words in an unincorporated business name you should seek the advice of Companies House.

Institute or Institution - approval for use of this word is normally given only to those organisations that are carrying out research at the highest standing. You will need to show that the company or business does not conflict with other existing organisations and that it has appropriate regulations or examination standards. You will need evidence of support from other representative and independent bodies.

Words that imply specific objects or functions

Patent or Patentee - a name including either of these words will only be approved if it does not contravene the Patents Act.

Chamber of Commerce, and/or Trade and/or Industry, etc. - if you wish to use a name that includes one of these expressions, Companies House will seek the advice of the Chamber of Commerce before considering whether approval should be given.

Co-operative - companies wanting to use this word must be limited by guarantee with control in the hands of the members and with a non-profit distribution clause in the company's articles.

Group - if use of this word implies that there are a number of companies under one ownership, then you will need to provide evidence of association with one or more Gibraltar or overseas companies and give details of the other companies that together make up that group. If, however, the name clearly shows that the company or business is to promote the interests of a group of individuals, then the name will normally be approved.

Holding(s) - companies wishing to use the word "holding" or "holdings" must be a holding company and must confirm this upon incorporation by stating the activity of the company as one of the following standard industrial classification codes:

64200 Holding Non-trading Company;
64201 Activities of agricultural holding companies;
64202 Activities of production holding companies;
64203 Activities of construction holding companies;
64204 Activities of distribution holding companies;
64205 Activities of financial services holding companies;
64206 Holding of a Private Residence / Real Estate;
64207 Holding of a Yacht / Vessel;
64208 Holding of Personal Assets; or
64209 Activities of other holding companies n.e.c.

If a company initially incorporates as a holding company and then ceases to conduct any of the holding activities specified above, it will be required to remove the word "holding(s)" from its name so as not to mislead the public as to the general nature of its business. It would also have to select a different classification code when filing its next annual return to reflect this change.

Post Office, Giro, Police, Customs, Immigration, Friendly Society or Industrial Provident Society - names including any of these expressions will normally be refused unless there are special circumstances.

Register or Registered - each application for use of either of these words will be assessed on its merits. As a general guide, if names that include these words are linked with a professional qualification, Companies House will seek advice from the appropriate body. The name as a whole must not imply a connection with the Gibraltar Government or a local authority.

Trade Union - names including this expression will normally be refused unless they conform to legislation relating to Trade Unions.

Charter or Chartered - names that include these words will be refused if they falsely give the impression that the company has a Royal Charter. If either of these words is used to qualify a profession, Companies House will seek the advice of the appropriate governing body before considering whether to approve the name. The name will be approved if it refers to Yacht Charter.

Benevolent - names that include this word will normally be refused if they imply that the company has charitable status, unless the company is limited by guarantee and has a non-profit distribution clause in the articles of association. If you want to use this word in the name of an unincorporated business you should seek the advice of Companies House.

Foundation – will be granted if the name is used for a Foundation established under the Private Foundations Act 2017. Furthermore, the use of this word may also be considered for companies limited by guarantee but this will depend on the activity that the company will be engaging in.

Evidence of the proof of qualification will be required by Companies House for the use of words which details a specific function or specific professional services that the individual or business will be offering to the public, for example, for the use of any of the following words:

"WE HEREBY CONFIRM THAT THIS COMPANY WILL NOT BE INVOLVED IN THE RETAIL OF MEDICINAL PRODUCTS AS DEFINED BY SECTION 60 OF THE MEDICAL AND HEALTH ACT 1997"

However pharmaceutical companies that will be involved in such trade will not provide the above-stated letter, but will need to provide evidence of their registration as pharmacists from the Medical Registration Board.

For the use of any of the following words, an activity letter stating clearly and in detail what the intended activity of the entity will be will need to accompany the application for incorporation.
